

Chapter 3 Scope

Scope decides where an identifier is visible.

A block introduces a new lexical environment.

Nested functions can read the environment they were created in.

3.2 Closures

A closure captures the binding, not the value.

That is why a var loop shares one binding across iterations.

